

To whom it may concern:

I am pleased to write this letter in support of Adam Henry Zynger, M.D., a graduate of the University of Rome, School of Medicine, who has completed his graduation thesis on "Osteoporosis and Exercise" under my direction in the 1989/90 academic year.

He has demonstrated a considerable diligence in gathering the material and an intellectual discipline, and curiosity in approaching this complex issue, being able to establish a link between the results of patient studies and the hypothetic mechanisms of the effect of exercise on bone remodeling.

During his clerkship in my department, he effectively and cooperatively worked with staff and peers, showing confidence in managing a broad range of medical diseases and sensitivity to the patients' needs.

Adam H. Zynger is, in my opinion, a reliable and dependable person, and I gladly recommend him to your attention.

Sincerely yours,

Prof. Luciano Palagi, M.D.
